A FOUR-DAY EXCURSION TO

SANTORINI (Akrotiri and Ancient Thera)

to be conducted by Professor Christos Doumas
and Dr. Stavros Paspalas

on Friday 31st May, Saturday 1st June, Sunday
2nd June and Monday 3rd June 2013

We are very happy to announce a four-day tour to Santorini, where we shall visit the world-famous sites of Akrotiri and Ancient Thera. We shall stay in Fira, the main town of the island that is built along the edge of the volcanic caldera.

Akrotiri, the amazingly well-preserved Bronze Age town engulfed by an ancient explosion of the island's volcano (c. 1600 BC) has been under systematic excavation for nigh on half a century. It is primarily known for its well-preserved architecture and its intriguing wall paintings. A number of years ago the site was re-opened to the public, though an unfortunate accident led to its closure soon afterwards. A few months ago the site, now protected under a newly-erected state-of-the-art shelter, was again opened to visitors. The Friends of the AAIA are unbelievably fortunate in being able to offer a guided tour over the site which will be conducted by Professor Christos Doumas, the excavator of Akrotiri since 1974. We will all benefit from the insights that Professor Doumas will share with us.

We shall also visit the site of Ancient Thera, the main settlement of the island during the Archaic through to the Early Byzantine periods, and one of the most important poleis of the southern Cyclades in Archaic and Classical times. A little-visited site, as it lies –metaphorically– in the shadow of Akrotiri, Ancient Thera has much to reward its visitor. Perched at an altitude of 360 m. above sea level on Mesavouno the well-preserved ruins offer an introduction to urban island life in antiquity. Dr. Stavros Paspalas will guide us over Ancient Thera.

Many of the finds made both at Akrotiri and Ancient Thera are on display in Fira. Those of the former at the Museum of Prehistoric Thera, and those of the latter at the Thera Archaeological Museum. Visits to these museums are included in the programme, and Dr. Paspalas will be present to answer any questions.
